

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF ANIMAL SCIENCE

Distinguished Teacher Award

Name of Award: The American Society of Animal Science Distinguished Teacher Award.

Nature of Award: A specified monetary award and a plaque.

Purpose: Recognition of distinguished teachers of undergraduate and/or graduate courses in animal science.

Eligibility for Nomination: Be currently employed in teaching at the time of nomination, and to have been actively teaching for a period of not less than 8 years. This does not exclude section heads, department heads, or deans, providing they were also personally engaged in undergraduate and/or graduate classroom teaching during the school year. If disability or retirement is involved, nominees must have engaged in undergraduate and/or graduate teaching within 36 months prior to January 1 of the year in which presentation of the award is made.

Criteria for Evaluation of Nominees:

- Ability to motivate and stimulate students.
- The impression made on students by the mastery of the subject, techniques, vision and attitudes of the nominee.
- Evidence of continual interest in the improvement of teaching.
- The content and nature of the courses taught, with emphasis placed on responsibilities, organization of teaching materials, original contributions to teaching and ability to translate research into terms of useful practice.
- Diversification of activities such as student counselor; training and placement; advisor for student clubs; service on departmental, college, and university committees; and research and extension activities. (Not all of these are essential as factors in consideration for the award).
- Extracurricular activities beyond regular teaching duties.
- Service to agriculture and related industries.
