AIC Future Governance Structure

Proposal and Action Items for Stakeholder Groups

Action Items for Stakeholder Groups
1. Please distribute this document amongst your executive and/or membership for discussion as you see fit.
2. Provide written feedback to Frances Rodenburg (frodenburg@aic.ca) on the overall plan and the specific items on which we are requesting input by September 15, 2011.
3. If your group finds the plan acceptable, pass a resolution supporting the plan in principle.

Proposed New AIC Governance Structure
This document is a result of deliberations by the AIC Restructuring Task Force formed in December, 2010. We have also had consultations with CAST (Council for Agricultural Science and Technology) in the US.
Your feedback will be analyzed by the Advisory Council, as proposed, this fall and winter. Permanent changes to the AIC structure, if approved, will be implemented at the 2012 AGM.

Overall Structure
The governance structure would be comprised of two bodies, a larger advisory group (to be called something like the Advisory Council) and a smaller group to serve as the Board of Directors.
There would be a nominating committee chaired by the Past President with representation from the committees of the Advisory Council to address membership of both the Advisory Council and Board of Directors.

Advisory Council

Purposes
• To allow stakeholder groups to discuss and deliberate, on a broad level, the vision and direction of AIC
• To provide input and advice on policy and projects to the Board of Directors
• To provide a pool of people who could serve on AIC committees providing support and input to staff as requested
• To serve as a pool of knowledgeable future members of the Board of Directors
• To allow government employees who cannot serve on the Board to have participate and lend their expertise to AIC goals.
• To directly involve a broad range of members from the agricultural sector

Composition
There would be a total of 12 – 15 members with our current membership base. When we have more member organizations, the number of members on the Advisory Council could increase.

There would be 3 or 4 standing committees to which members of the Advisory Council would belong. CAST, for example, has 3 committees: plant, animal and food. Since several of our association members are agrologists’ institutes, we might have one with an interest in professionalism issues. The structure, function and membership of committees would be finalized over the next year.

Stakeholder groups who have paid dues to AIC will be allowed to nominate one member. Some non dues-paying groups that represent other industry perspectives may be requested to nominate members at the discretion of the Board of Directors.

Certain members of the Board of Directors would be delegated to be part of this group (one per committee).

There would be an effort made to ensure the Advisory Council is balanced based on geography (minimum one per province?), gender (at least three males and at least three females), age (over/under 40?).

There would also be balanced representation from different sectors, i.e. federal and provincial government, industry and academia.

If, after nominations were received, there were major gaps in representation the nominating committee would be empowered to seek out qualified persons to fill these gaps.

If an Advisory Council member moves to the Board of Directors their position would be considered vacant and would be filled by a new member.

Individual members would not have representation per se on the Advisory Board.

Process
The Advisory Council would meet in person once per year. Committees could meet at that time and in between, as frequently as they feel appropriate.

Meetings would be by teleconference unless a majority of members were going to be in one location for another reason. Committees would elect their own chairs at their first meeting.

There would be consultation with the general membership via surveys, email, phone calls, etc.

This is an advisory group and recommendations to the Board would not be binding.

The current Task Force will serve in the capacity of an Advisory Council until the 2012 AIC AGM. Member groups will nominate their representatives, who might be the current Task Force member.

Board of Directors

Purpose

Assume fiduciary responsibility for the organization

Be responsible for setting goals and strategic direction of the organization
Composition
President Elect, President, Past President, Treasurer, 3 directors to liaise with Advisory Council (one per committee) and the executive director (ex-officio) as secretary.
Balanced representation would be sought based on the general criteria outlined for the Advisory Council.
Once on the Board of Directors, a member is working on behalf of AIC, not the group from which they originated.
For the next year (2011 – 2012) we will go with the current AIC Board with some additions to fill vacancies. (We will require 3 additional Board members for the coming year and would welcome nominations from stakeholder groups.)
The President Elect position would be open to nominations from any member (individual or group) in good standing of AIC. The election would be by the Advisory Council and Board of Directors.
The Treasurer would be appointed by the Nominating Committee.

Fees
Background
At the present time membership fees are approximately $50K or 6% of AIC revenue. This is comprised of $38K from individual members and $12K from associations. We currently operate on a roughly break even basis. In order to undertake new projects such as revising the website, preparing issue papers and raising the profile of AIC, revenues need to increase. Currently we have 7 scientific societies plus Dairy Farmers of Canada that pay $1000, Ontario Institute of Agrologists pay $1000 and the NB and Nfld agrologists each pay $500. Individual members currently pay $125.
If we could raise an additional $30 – 50K it would put AIC on a much more viable footing.

Issues requiring feedback

1. Should all members of stakeholder groups automatically be AIC members (i.e. a portion of their fees would be directed to AIC (déjà vu))?

2. Reciprocal members
We currently have several reciprocal members such as CAST, the 4-H Council and the Canadian Farm Business Management Council. We do not feel that they should be entitled to a seat on the Advisory Council but would like some way to engage them more fully. Any suggestions would be welcome.
